
Northern BFLG - 7th December 2009

Posted by julienoble - 2010/01/12 12:03

Hi all, I am finally providing an update on the second Northern BFLG - my first as a facilitator. To say that I was nervous was an understatement - especially when Stella rang me that morning to say that she was popping in.

However, thanks to the totally cool, calm & prepared Antony Shearn, from Learningenius, who created a great learning environment before delivering an amazing session about releasing the unconscious genius, the meeting was a great success!

The energy in the room was palatable, the buzz was audible & I think that the discussion groups could have gone on a lot longer if we had time. You really need to check out the photos!

The topics that different member sort advice & support on included: how do we get away from the belief that all training sessions have to be 9 - 5? How can we get a lot more information into a shorter time? How do we make training sessions more edgy & appeal to younger delegates? plus How do you present yourself innovatively?

I am hoping that all the discussions leaders will place updates on the forum before the next meeting, partly to make my job easier, also partly to be able to continue the transfer of knowledge

Well that's the update from me, I am looking forward to the next meeting with a little less fear as I know that I will be in good company & I am hoping that we can all continue to spread the word & that our numbers will continue to swell! See you all on 19th March - same place - same time

=====

Re:Northern BFLG - 7th December 2009

Posted by Jaqui Temperley - 2010/01/18 19:26

Hi Julie

Where can we check out the photos.....searched the site and cant seem to locate any photos except on the video testimonials??

many thanks

Jaqui:huh:

Re:Northern BFLG - 7th December 2009

Posted by allymcculloch - 2010/01/19 00:21

Hi Jaqui,

Here's the link to the photo's from your Dec group:

<http://www.braininbusiness.com/bflg/mtg-2009-12-07-photos/index.htm>

It looks like you all had a great time :)

Ally (Southerner) :)
